In connection with this Armenian question, Americans interested in the subject may have felt some anxiety respecting the truth of the reports of outrages, because of the narrative of Senor Nimenez, the Spanish explorer. If his statement be true, the Armenians will have bitter cause to regret that they have falsely aroused the sympathies of Europe and America. But it should be borne in mind that there is a story current that Sefier Ximenez is influenced by strong Turkish proclivities. It, therefore, becomes more desirable to await the outcome of the commission of in-

In Continental affairs the French esplonage malady has furnished much that has been painfully interesting. The Dreyfus incident is still a mystery. As to whom the man was serving, the undercurrent reports in Paris point to Italy as well as to Germany, notwithstanding all official and semi-official explanations. But the Parisians forget the beam in their own eye; for the very week Captain Dreyfus was degraded one of their own officers was sentenced to imprisonment by Italian Court of Appeal for espionage on the Alpine frontier. Captain Romani was taken redhanded, with plans of Italian forts and passes in his possession. This incident naturally caused much anger in Rome, and the irritation in that city is the more accentuated because of the evident disappointment in Paris circles that Signor Giolitti's conspiracy to bring about Signor Crispi's downfall has failed. The object of the sudden withdrawal of the Italian Ambassador in Paris is not unconnected with this fresh strain in the relations between Italy and France.

Lord Randolph Churchill seems to be struggilng back to life, and it is just possible that the doctors may prolong his existence a few years; but no one believes that he can recover from the paralysis that weighs so heavily upon him. His prolonged coma seems to have been the result of a hemorrhage of the brain, which medical skill fortunately stopped.

Great curiosity was felt as to how Mr. Henry James would succeed with his new play, "Guy Domville." All accounts agree that it is not satisfactory. Its plot would have been an admirable groundwork of a novel, but the rapid action of the stage destroyed its effect. Mr. Archer is the only serious critic who advises Mr. Alexander, the manager, to refuse the first night's verdict.

Mr. Oscar Wilde's "Ideal Husband" was almost as adversely criticised when it first appeared; but the piece has been greatly improved, and now shows some signs of prolonged existence. It is a story of blackmailing, compounded upon a monotonous plot without much ingenu-Its success depends entirely upon the dialogue, which contains a good deal of forced sparkle and epigram; but neither the sparkle nor the epigram equals Mr. Wilde's previous efforts. Such characters as it describes do not exist in real life; but the same may be said of many other pieces. In one respect the play is a superb success; it has given Mr. Charles Hawtry a better part than he ever previously secured.

NIGHT ALARM IN HAWAII

CROWDS OF ROYALIST NATIVES ASSEMBLE IN HONOLULU.

THE GOVERNMENT WAS ON THE ALERT, HOW-AWAY-MANY ARRESTS EXPECTED-

THE MINISTER OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS ON HIS WAY TO WASHINGTON

Honolulu, Jan. 5, via San Francisco, Jan. 12.-It was said in these dispatches on January 2 that there was probably no valid foundation for an alarm which arose on the night of December 31 that the native partisans of the Queen were about to fire the city and try to carry out Bush's programme of seizing the Government.

But there was more in it than was believed. serious alarm occurred on the night of January 3, when unmistakable evidence of its reality was furnished. Considerable numbers of natives came into town after dark from the surrounding country, and gathered in groups upon the streets. At the same time the liquor-stores were deserted by sober. The police at once became active, citizen guards were upon the alert. Before $ o'clock, however, the conspirators became discouraged by the evident activity of the Government and slunk away.

There was also a gathering of natives at the immigration depot, a retired spot beyond the marine railway. Over 100 men were found there by the police, who succeeded in inducing them to leave the place. They seemed to be waiting to receive arms there, probably from a small vessel, supposed to be prowling around. There is much mystery about what actually happend that night. The authorities are reticent. There seems no doubt of the existence of an organization of Royalist leaders, to whom large numbers of the natives have undertaken to report and obey their orders. Many arrests are expected. There seems no probability of any actual outbreak in the face of the great strength and alertness of the Government. singular circumstance was that five white

A singular circumstance was that five white policemen patrolling the shore for opium smuggers toward Waikiki were held up and disarmed separately by a company of seven men. They were detained about one hour by the men. All has been quiet since that time.

Francis M. Hatch, Minister of Foreign Affairs, embarked to-day for Washington. His errand is to confer with Minister Thurston. Mr. Hatch will place Mr. Thurstop in possession of the latest views of the Government. He may be able to put in a few days work with public men in Washington on matters affecting Hawaii. Besides the question of annexation, now rather in abeyance, there are other matters, such as the proposed cable, the removal of Pearl Bar, the presence of United States warships, etc., which call for attention. As the session of Congress is short, some of these questions may suddenly come to the front, and this Goygrament desires to be strongly represented. Mr. Taurston will therefore be reinforced by Mr. Hatch.

RUMORS OF DISSENSIONS IN THE CABI-NET UNFOUNDED.

ARRANGING THE PROGRAMME FOR THE COMING

YARDS-SIR HENRY

London, Jan. 12.-The proceedings of the Cahinet Council, which was held last Thursday, and about whose deliberations there has be much speculation, were by no means so vitally important as was supposed. with the arrangement of the Parliamentary work for the coming session, the sequence of the measures to be introduced, and the manner in which they should be presented. These ques tions being decided, the construction of the Queen's speech was taken up and the question exhaustively debated. These topics constituted all the matters of public interest discussed by The widely circulated rumors of grave dissersions as to the advisability of an early dissolution, in view of the Parliamentary situation and the order in which bills should be introduced, are utterly without foundation, and the stories that serious differences have arisen between Lord Rosebery and Sir William Har court are exactly the reverse of the truth. well-informed adherents of the Ministry know that the Cabinet is united and in thorough accord as to the policy to be pursued, though the Ministers have not yet decided upon the line of Parliamentary tactics which will yield the best In minor matters the Cabinet united, but the leading and delicate question of how to mention the House of Lords in the Speech from the Throne was keenly debated in the Council, and the various propositions submitted were exhaustively discussed. If the omission of any reference to the House of Lords from the Queen's speech could thwart the machinations of the Opposition, who are trying to force the Government into declaring themselves upon this question early in the session, the matter would be gladly ignored, but the majority of the Cabinet, in view of the official utterances of Lord

subject are of the opinion that the Government were already committed to a declaration, and

Lord Rosebery and Professor James Bryce are to speak at the Universal Suffrage Congress at Cardiff, on January 18, when it is understood that the Premier will promise the Executive Committee of the National Liberal Federation a full statement of the Government's programme in regard to the House of Lords. The Congress will afterward wind up its session with the passage of a resolution reaffirming the anti-Lords declarations of the Leeds Conference. In regard to dissolution, the leading members of the Liberal party recognize the fact that the uncertainty of the Government's position may precipitate its the session of the House. The Ministerial whips report that according to the best information obtainable the Government's majority of sixteen in the House depends upon the adhesion of the Radical wing to the Ministry, the full vote of the McCarthylies, and the absention of the Parnellites from voting with the Conservatives, Still, the Government are confident that they will be able to hold out till the main measures and a popular Budget are introduced, and these are relied upon to gain sufficient adherents to enable them to pull through. Sir William Harcourt expects that the showing of a substantial surplus will enable the Government to shape the Budget so that it will appeal successfully to the people in the next election, and it is believed by the Liberal leaders that their internal discords will not prevent the McCarthyites from meeting in Parliament with a united front.

The conference of the Federation of Miners has The conference of the Federation of Miners has decided not to support the coming Trades Union Congress, which has been projected and summoned on the eve of a general election. The Congress was initiated by Keir Hardle, John Burns and other labor leaders, with a view to committing the trades-unionists to the support of the Socialist candidates for Parliament, and the decision of the Miners' Congress is a serious blow to the hopes of the Socialistic Unionists.

The mass demonstration of the representatives of the meat trades which was held on January 8 has created little public sympathy, since it is well known that it was purely an agitation gotten up by jobbers and not for the benefit of either the retailers or the people. The jobbers' outcry that the Americans are trying to secure control of the meat trade here is ridiculed by "The Live Stock Journal," which suggests that in the event of the American shippers failing to agree the butchers themselves shall open shops for the sale of American meats. The recent case of pleuro-pneumonia detected at Glasgow in a cargo of cattle from the United States, combined with the reports of the Belgian official veterinary surgeons verifying the allegations of the presence of the disease in American cargoes arriving at Antwerp and Brussels, puts the possibility of free importation of American cattle far into the future.

Since the Duke of Norfolk, who is the Premier Duke as well as the Premier Earl of the United Kingdom, became a County Councilior, members of the aristocracy of high and low grade have been rushing in wherever there was a chance for candidacy for such a piace. The candidates standing in the pending elections include the Earl of Dunraven, the Earl of Dudley, Earl Cadogan, Lord Amptbill and the Earl of Ouslow. Sir George Ouslow, the Marchioness of London-derry and the Countess of Warwick have been elected to the Parish Councils.

There is great activity in the Cowes shippards just now in the way of fitting out yachts for the Mediterranean. The steam yacht Xarifa, owned by Francis M. The Prince of Wales's yacht Britannia has been recoppered and will sail for the Mediterranean in a short time.

"Among residents and the business community." the Minister says, "the new Cabinet is considered especially strong, and from its personnel, geographical selection and the progressive spirit credited to its members gives unusual promise of success. The nomination of M. Forehard as Minister of Pinance is regarded as a pledge for the rehabilitation of the Treasury on a better basis, and this is emphasized by an immediate decrease of 4 per cent in the price of exchange. I know little of the new Minister of Foreign Relations, but all that I can hear is to his credit. He was a long time a commissing of the Government and has recently been a merchant in this city. He is regarded as a clear-headed man of business and is universally conceded an honest man."

BISMARCK Berlin, Jan. 12,-The preliminary debate on the Anti-Socialist bill was concluded to-day, and the measure was reférred to a committee of twenty eight members.

Chancellor von Hohenlohe delivered a vigorous speech in defence of the bill. It represented, he declared, the minimum of power the Government must have if it would uphold its authority The measure did not fetter free criticism, nor did seek to curb expression of opinion except in lead to breaches of the peace. The bill was especially directed against the international crimes of Socialists. No Government, the Chancellor asserted, had done more for the working classes than that of Germany. Since 1891 Germany had set on foot social reforms unequalled in any

At the conclusion of the Chancellor's speech Count Herbert Bismarck advanced to the Govrnment tribune and shook Prince Hohenlohe's Subsequently all the Ministers except Baren Marschail von Rieberstein and Dr. von Bötticher descended to the floor and surrounded Count Bismarck, with whom they shook hands and engaged in animated conversation. The in cident caused much comment.

The Reichstag has been busy all the weel with Socialism and anti-Socialism. If there was any doubt as to the immediate fate of the Anti-Socialist bill, it was settled when Judge Groeber must be amended. This meant that the same threadbare old matter that has been laid before the Deputies ever since Social Democrats began electing members. Three-fourths of the speakers treated the bill academically, discussing the abstract doctrines of Socialism and defining the attitudes of the various parties to the Social Democratic agitation. Yesterday the session was occupied with small talk from such inconsiderable persons as Liebermann von Sonnenberg, the "Jewbalter"; Dr. Sigi, the Bavarian Prussianhater; Baron Wolszlegier, who represents the Poles; Baron Hodenberg, who as an Independent represented only himself, and a Bavarian merchant named Kroeber. Throughout the debate the Radical and Social Democratic speakers commanded most attention. Rudolph von Ben nigsen, the National Liberal leader, and Herr von Köller, Minister of the Interior and stepfather of the bill, were the most effective orators the Cablest Chancellor Prince Hohenlohe

The great social and political function of the week was the Emperor's party at the New Palace present were Dr. Miquel, Minister of Finance; the chief officials of the Imperial household, and twenty-five Deputies. The Emperor appeared in an Admiral's'uniform to welcome his guests. The Emperor led them to the Shell Hall to see the Christmas trees of the Imperial family. After cigars had been handed around, he took the party to a salon. The Deputies, Privy Councillor and Court Councillors were seated in a semicircle, facing a wall covered with numerous maps and sketches of maritime defences. The Emperor wielded the pointer and spoke for two hours and a half on the necessity of strengthening the German Navy. In the opinion of the deferential listeners it was a masterly address. At supper, which followed the lecture, there was a copious supply of beer and cigars. The Emperor, as usual, did a large part of the talking. He was enthuslastic in his praises of Japan's military prowess and discussed with hardly less gusto her great naval victories. Before the evening was over he had talked with every Deputy present concerning his pet naval plans. The "Hamburgische Correspondent," which gets occasional hints from the Wilhelm-strasse, says:

The Emperor's design is to reinforce the Navy with a number of swift cruisers. As Emperor William I made a powerful Army, so the present Em-peror will found a powerful Navy of the first rank. Anger was aroused on all sides yesterday by an incident in the Budget Committee of the Reichstag. The estimates last year contained an item tag. The estimates last year contained an item for a commandant in Altona. This liem was regarded as needless by the committee, and was granted only on the condition that the post be abolished as soon as vacated by the existing incumbent. The post was vacated during the year, but it was filled by the Emperor, and the same item reappeared in the appropriation bill, despite all previous pledges. The Emperor thus overrode deliberately the decision of the Reichstag. Small as the sum in question is, it is likely to be the subject of a serious condict. The Conservatives promise to join the Liberals in Parliament to uphold their common rights to control even the smallest details of the grants.

Efforts have been made to persuade Prince Bismarck to come to Berlin and receive the hom-age of the Nation on his eightieth birthday. The demonstration was planned to take place in the spacious promende hall of the new Reichstag building, and all the cities and towns of Germany building, and all the cities and towns of Germany were to send deputations. Numerous delegates were expected also from German societies abroad. The whole thing may prove impossible, however, as the Prince is suffering from painful but not serious aliments in Friedrichsruh, and pleads rheumatism and numbago as excuses for staying at home. It is believed that he finally will arsent. It would be a grand ceremonial. The Emperor

The majority of the members, he said, were morally unfit to perform any public act. The Chamber contained so many dishonest men that it was incapacitated to discharge its duties to the people. the famous convention of 1793, when Represent the cesure, of the guillotine. But, at that time, the extreme Left, or the Montagne, could rely upon the practical support of the patriotic Sans-Culottes, who were armed and whose frequent invasions of the legislative sanctuary terrified the Conservative into voting against the Deputies accused of bribery, frauds and other malversations. At present, the Panama affair, that of the Compiter d'Escompte, the trial of Allez and his accomplices in frauds relative to Government contracts, and so many other unclean transactions have exposed the majority of the French Chamber to grave charges. The Government has been compelled to dismiss many of its officials, judiciary magistrates like Van Cassel, sub-prefects, and even its Governor-General of Indo-China, the mountebank Lanessan. But the legislative and the executive powers will have little to fear, so long as the faubourgs in Paris, Lyons, Marsellies and other large cities shall not have recovered the guns from which they were deprived after the collapse of the Communistic movements in these places in 1871. Jaurés, Rousnet and other orators of the Extreme Left will not succeed in persuading or forcing their Conservative colleagues into an acquiescence to the revolutionary measures which they advocate. Some hot-headed men might ascemble and attempt to deliver from jail the Socialist Deputy Géraulit-Richard, but they would be soon overpowered. The Government is only afraid of one thing, that is the result of new elections, which would increase the number of revolutionary deputies. But the constitutional time for these elections is not near at hand. the Extreme Left, or the Montagne,

The "Prescription" is a powerful uterine tonic and nervine, especially adapted to woman's delicate wants, for it regulates and promotes all the natural functions, builds up, invigorates and cures.

Many women suffer from nervous prostration, or exhaustion, owing to congestion, or to disorder of the special functions.
